* . FERNS . *

The ferns we have listed do well in light sun and partial shade, but will grow taller in shade where more moisture and humus are usually available to them. Ferns are a must in any wildflower garden and add a touch of finesse. Ferns are excellent to cover the bare spots left by the early spring blooming wildflowers, and equally nice among other wildflowers.

1F-BRACKEN FERN-Pteridium aquilinum. 2-3'. A single broad spreading frond. Spreads underground. Does best in drier open woods or in soil of average moisture. Sun or shade.40¢

2F-INTERRUPTED FERN-Osmunda claytoniana. 2-4'. Nice light green fronds that are very woolly when first coming thru the ground. Some fronds have fertile seed spores midway, but soon disappear. Upland woods or damp places. Soil rich in humus.40¢

3F-LADY FERN-Athyrium filix-femina. 2-3'. Very graceful fronds; finely cut foliage. Easy to grow in open woods with light sun and shade. They stay in clumps and do not spread underground.40¢

4F-OSTRICH FERN-Pteretis nodulosa. 3-4' depending on moisture available. An excellent fern beside a pool or open woods. Graceful plumey fronds. Soil rich in humus. Spreads underground.40¢

NOTE.....Plant ferns shallow; wet down thoroughly and mulch with leafmold or other coarse material until started. Never use whole leaves.
